|                          | Nature is often a beautiful, wonderful source of inspiration for artists. And what better way to celebrate our connection with nature than by creating a natural history artwork. In this class, Kate will chat about the history of nature studies and how selecting just one tiny beautiful little fragment such as a leaf, a shell, an insect, from the vast palette of nature can lead to a lovely art journey. We will look at materials selection, subject selection, composing the picture, drawing and painting. Plenty of subjects will be provided and students are welcome to bring their own too. |              |                              |

While the exhibition is running there will be a video streaming online featuring the top 40 paintings from each country. It should be fascinating. Many of our Victorian artists have entered their work and will be notified when the exhibition works are selected.

From Fiona McKinnon

Sincere thanks for all your wonderful kindness and support following Ian's sudden death on 27th October. Knowing that you care has been, and will always be, a truly precious source of comfort.

With much gratitude, and love ### and from Jenny....

Dear All,

With most sincere gratitude I thank you for your wonderful attitude, support, genuine friendships, generosity, knowledge, time and plant sharing, which all contributes to the atmosphere here throughout the year.

The rapid expansion of worldwide interest in botanical art is evidence of the excitement and enrichment we feel when we study or create a major painting acknowledging our love of nature. It's wonderful to take quick photos of plants, but studying every aspect of a living plant throughout the duration of your painting, gives us an excitement of discovery and awareness, which can be read by the viewer, not only of the brilliant functional design – but also the life within the plant.

I marvel at the plant worlds ability to cope, adapt and survive through adversities, and this is a message for us all. I am grateful that my painting is what inspires me, and helps me to feel a tremendous inner happiness. And it is wonderful to have you along on that journey.

I wish you all a joyful, peaceful and relaxing Christmas, with a safe, happy, healthy and fruitful New Year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A WONDERFUL NEW YEAR TO YOU ALL.
PLEASE BE SAFE.
